Chairman's Statement

Overview

Lowland's Net Asset Value ("NAV") fell 10.6%, compared with a decline of 1.8% in our benchmark, the FTSE All-Share Index. This disappointing performance is analysed by the Fund Managers in their report, which also covers activity in the portfolio.

Lowland has always been characterised by periods of outperformance and underperformance. Over the longer term, performance has been strong, with an increase in NAV (total return) of 380% over the last ten years, against 187% in our benchmark. The Company's investment style, with a distinct bias away from the largest stocks in the index, gives rise both to the periods of underperformance and the long-term outperformance.

Small companies have added substantial value to the portfolio over the long-term and they will again. The portfolio also has a bias to industrial companies, which over the six months were weak overall, as uncertainty over trade wars dominated investor sentiment.

Dividend

Underlying earnings have performed well and, helped by the change in accounting policy announced last year, earnings per share rose to 22.2p from 18.4p. The first interim dividend was 14.5p and the Board has today declared a second interim dividend of 15.0p. The total distribution at the half-year stage therefore amounts to 29.5p, compared with 26.0p at this time last year. Lowland started paying quarterly dividends in 2013 and since then each quarter's dividend has been greater than that paid in the same quarter in the previous year. It is the ambition to maintain this practice. Barring unforeseen circumstances, the Board intends to pay total dividends of 59.5p this year, extending to seven years the period in which our annual dividends have grown at 10%.

Gearing

During the half-year, gearing was fairly constant at around 12%. It has increased to 13% on 4 June 2019 (the latest practicable date prior to publication of this report), and we would expect it to increase moderately from this level.

Share price discount

During the period the share price discount (on a total return basis) fluctuated between 2.2% and 6.4%. At the period-end it was 6.4% and it stood at 4.6% as at 4 June 2019. The Board does not operate a formal discount control mechanism. The policy with regard to discount is set out in last year's Chairman's Statement.

Board

I advised at the year-end that Kevin Carter had indicated his desire to retire, and this he will do at the end of this month. The Board's thanks to Kevin for his first-class service to the Company bear repeating. I am delighted to advise that following a search and selection process, the Board has agreed that Tom Walker be appointed to the Board with effect from 1 July 2019. Tom was formerly a Fund Manager with Martin Currie Investment Management, and brings valuable experience from his career. He is a director of EP Global Opportunities Trust plc and will be appointed as a director of JPMorgan Japan Smaller Companies Trust plc with effect from 29 July 2019.

Chairman's Statement

Outlook

In times of uncertainty, opportunities for profitable investment occur. The Fund Managers are becoming increasingly confident that stock prices are discounting most of the problems facing the economy. Value is evident and therefore borrowings are being increased. We are net buyers of equities, utilising current uncertainties to refresh the portfolio with good-quality companies on reasonable valuations.

On a final note, we value contact with our shareholders and I would be delighted to be contacted at the Company Secretary's email address (as shown on the inside back cover) should you have any matters you wish to raise with me.

Sector Analysis

Fund Managers' Statement

Performance review

Lowland's performance in the six months to the end of March was disappointing. The NAV fell 10.6% relative to a 1.8% fall in the FTSE All-Share (both figures on a total return basis). The fall in NAV was concentrated in the fourth quarter of 2018, when the NAV fell 14.9%. The NAV has recovered by 3.5% calendar year to date.

There are two key elements to the underperformance. The first is size, as small and medium-sized companies underperformed during the six month period:

	Total return for the 6 months to 31 March 2019 (%)
FTSE All-Share	-1.8
FTSE 100	-1.0
FTSE 250	-4.9
FTSE AIM All-Share	-16.0

Lowland continues to invest in small and medium-sized companies, with 55% of the portfolio invested outside of the FTSE 100 as at the end of March. The best sales and earnings growth will, over time, come from this portion of the portfolio and it has been the largest source of outperformance for the Company over the long term. Small and medium-sized companies are, however, more tied into the domestic economic cycle and therefore they are more vulnerable to underperformance at times when there are concerns about the UK economy.

The second element of the underperformance was sector allocation, specifically the industrials weighting, which as at the end of March was 25% of the portfolio. In the fourth quarter of 2018, US economic data showed signs of weakening at a time when Europe and China were already exhibiting signs of a slowdown. This led to reduced (although still positive) expectations for 2019 global economic growth. For the industrials sector this resulted in sharp and fairly indiscriminate underperformance which, in our view, did not adequately reflect the diversity of end markets to which the industrials held in the portfolio are exposed.

As an example, the largest industrial company held is Senior, an engineering company that produces predominantly aerospace components. The civil aerospace market continues to grow well. Passenger miles flown per year are growing considerably above global economic growth, driven by emerging market demand. This trend is unlikely to change, leading to greater demand for new planes to which Senior is well exposed. Senior is winning considerable amounts of new civil aerospace work which is pressuring short-term margins. We see this work being won as a positive – it will lead to higher sales and earnings growth in future. The market, however, is sceptical that they will make a good return on this investment and as a result the shares fell 30% on a total return basis during the six months to the end of March, making it the largest individual detractor from performance. We continue to hold the position as in our view the shares are not reflecting the potential for future sales and earnings growth.

The top five active contributors to performance relative to the benchmark were:

- 1. Greene King – a UK pub and brewery. Shares recovered well from a low valuation as sales growth proved encouraging and a peer (Fuller's) sold their brewery asset at a high valuation.
- 2. Marshalls – a building materials company, primarily paving stones. Shares have performed well as a result of ongoing good organic growth. We have reduced the position on valuation grounds.
- 3. Churchill China – a crockery company based in Stoke-on-Trent. Management have done well to position the company as selling primarily to the restaurant industry where repeat sales are of greater importance and they have successfully grown market share.
- 4. Shoe Zone – a UK shoe retailer positioned at the 'value' end of the market. The management team have done an excellent job of reducing costs (such as rent) and we think the company can begin to grow sales via their website and a new, larger store format.
- 5. Hill & Smith – an industrial company that makes products including road crash barriers and messaging signs for roads. The shares recovered well following a difficult first half of 2018 as extremely cold weather delayed road building programmes.

The top five active detractors from performance relative to the benchmark were:

- 1. Senior – a predominantly aerospace components supplier. Earnings are under short-term pressure but they have good prospects to grow sales and earnings over the longer term.
- 2. Royal Mail – the largest deliverer of letters and parcels in the UK. Letter volumes have declined more steeply than anticipated as spending by businesses on direct marketing mail has decreased in the face of economic uncertainty. It is difficult to offset this reduced volume in the short term via cost reductions, as simplistically it means that each postman is delivering less volume but still has to do the same daily route. The position continues to be held as, in our view, the shares are factoring in a permanent deterioration in margins which we think is unlikely to materialise.
- 3. Carclo – a manufacturer of technical plastics for use in medical devices and LED lighting for high-end cars. Production problems in their LED lighting division have led to material cost increases and the balance sheet is heavily indebted. This position has been a mistake. It is a small position in the overall portfolio (0.3% as at 31 March 2019).
- 4. Stobart Group – a conglomerate which owns Southend airport and supplies biomass facilities in the UK. During the period the dividend was cut in order to reinvest in the business and this caused the shares to perform poorly. The position continues to be held as the company has excellent potential for earnings growth driven by more passengers travelling through Southend airport.
- 5. Low & Bonar – a buildings material manufacturer that had a high level of indebtedness and as a result needed to raise money from shareholders in order to strengthen the balance sheet (we participated in the equity raise). Under a new management team the business is becoming more focused on its core product areas, where they continue to make good operating margins.

Activity

The largest purchase during the period was a new position in Royal Bank of Scotland. Its legacy issues (such as PPI) are largely resolved and it has retreated to its core competency of commercial and personal lending in the UK. The primary reason for the purchase is their potential to return capital to shareholders via dividends and share buy-backs, which we think is underappreciated by the market.

The largest individual sale during the period was a reduction in the holding in Royal Dutch Shell. This continues to be the largest position in the portfolio (5.7% as at the end of March 2019). The position was added to in 2015 and 2016 during a period of severe oil price weakness. At the trough in the share price, the dividend yield rose to over 8% due to question marks about the dividend's sustainability. The company has since done an excellent job of reducing capital expenditure and operating costs and as a result their ability to generate enough cash flow to cover the dividend has greatly improved. As a result the shares have re-rated and as at the time of writing are yielding below 6%. As and when we find more exciting value opportunities elsewhere we expect to reduce the position further.

The outlook for the global economy remains uncertain, with much greater divergence than usual among economic growth forecasts. This is partly as a result of the US and Chinese trade war, in which there is no clarity regarding the level or duration of tariffs. Aside from economic uncertainty, there is ongoing political uncertainty, with the result of Brexit still unclear and the possibility of a general election. However, the most likely outcome is that the global economy will continue to grow (albeit at a reduced pace) and domestically focused equities are already trading at a considerable valuation discount.

In the context of very low bond yields, equities continue to look excellent value – the forecast yield on the portfolio over the next twelve months is currently 4.8% with scope for dividends to grow modestly while the 10-year gilt yield is under 1%. While there is considerable uncertainty, it is the cash returns available to shareholders that give us confidence in the outlook for equities and for this reason we expect to be net investors over the upcoming period.
