Investment objective and policy

To aim to provide capital growth by investing primarily in European Smaller Companies, excluding the United Kingdom.

Risk and reward profile

The fund currently has 2 types of share class in issue; A accumulation and I accumulation.

Each share class has the same risk and reward profile which is as follows:

The Synthetic Risk and Reward Indicator (SRRI) is calculated based on historical volatility over a rolling 5 year period, it is reviewed monthly and updated if volatility has changed materially to cause a movement in the SRRI level. The SRRI is an indicator and may not accurately reflect future volatility and market conditions.

The value of an investment in the fund can go up or down. When you sell your shares they may be worth less than you paid for them.

The risk/reward rating above is based on medium-term volatility. In the future, the fund's actual volatility could be higher or lower and its rated risk/reward level could change.

The lowest category does not mean risk free.

The fund's risk level reflects the following:

- As a category, smaller companies are more volatile than larger.
- The fund focuses on a single region.

- Fluctuations in exchange rates may cause the value of your investment to rise or fall.

The rating does not reflect the possible effects of unusual market conditions or large unpredictable events. Under normal market conditions the following risks may apply:

Counterparty risk The fund could lose money if a counterparty with which it transacts becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.

Focus risk The fund's value may fall where it has concentrated exposure to an issuer or type of security that is heavily affected by an adverse event.

Liquidity risk Certain securities could become hard to value or sell at a desired time and price.

Management risk Investment management techniques that have worked well in normal market conditions could prove ineffective or detrimental at other times.

The full list of the fund's risks are contained in the "Risk Factors" section of the fund's prospectus.

There have been no changes to the risk rating in the period.

The SRRI conforms to the ESMA guidelines for the calculation of the SRRI.

Investment review

There was no shortage of political events in the second half of 2016, with an Austrian election re-run, US presidential election and Italian referendum. Although the latter two resulted in what consensus viewed as the worst outcomes, markets soon moved on, deciding instead to focus on developments within the global economy, which looked encouraging. While many of Trump's proposed policies may lead to great uncertainty around foreign policy, protectionism and Republican Party unity, he looks likely to enact tax cuts and infrastructure spending in the early days of his presidency. In a world where markets had seemingly become certain of deflation (with many core government bonds yielding below 0%) fiscal expansion of this scale changes the outlook considerably. This should benefit equities over bonds (provided the bond market stays orderly) and 'value' equities over 'quality growth' stocks.

The fund performed well, driven by good stock selection as well as our bias toward the value style. We have resisted the urge in recent years to shift the portfolio to the better performing 'quality growth' end of the market, where valuations have continued to re-rate (undergone a reassessment by the market) to far beyond what we would deem reasonable value. Instead, we have sought attractively valued shares in the more cyclical end of the market.

The winners in the period included Gaztransport & Technigaz, an unloved company that licenses the technology for membranes used in the transportation of liquefied natural gas. The company announced that it had won some new orders. Banks also performed well, having struggled in the first half of 2016 through a combination of negative interest rates and capital shortfalls. Investors have been encouraged by policy setters around the world talking about a shift toward fiscal expansion rather than traditional quantitative easing (central bank stimulus measures). This has increased inflation expectations and steepened the yield curve, which should lead to much better profitability. Our main holding in this space was Van Lanschot, a Dutch bank shifting toward pure wealth management; we also had significant holdings in Aareal Bank in Germany and BPER in Italy. The main detractors from performance were IFG Group, Heijmans and Eitel.

In terms of activity, we sold GFK after its latest profit warning led to both the chief executive officer and the chairman stepping down. We had been hopeful that a turnaround by management could be achieved, but have now cut our losses and moved on. We added two high technology companies during the period. These were IBA, which manufactures particle accelerators used in targeted radiation therapy for cancer (especially those of the eye and brain), and Va-Q-Tec, through its initial public offering. The company is the leading premium player in the niche market of vacuum insulation solutions used in many industries, including temperature-sensitive transportation.

The portfolio remains biased toward the more cyclical and reflationary sectors. While markets, led by value, have moved a long way in a short space of time, the momentum in the global economy looks good. Donald Trump's policies are controversial but clearly aimed at raising inflation, and 2017 will be a transitional year for China's government - ahead of his second five-year term, President Xi Jinping will want to demonstrate willingness to support the economy. In Europe, politics remain fraught, but purchasing managers' indices are showing good improvement. Ultimately, we remain optimistic that earnings per share growth in European small caps will be superior to most asset classes in the world.
